22 Dead as TWA Transport Hits Hillside

By United Press

Seven airplane crashes killed 38 persons Sunday and Sunday night, turning Easter into a day of disaster. The worst tragedy was the flaming crash of a TWA passenger transport at Pittsburgh, Pa., Sunday night. It killed 22 persons and an investigation was underway today to determine the cause of the smashup. In the West, three airplanes were caught in freak storms and crashed. Each smashup killed four persons. An Air Force jet trainer, apparently out of fuel, crashed and burned trying to make a landing at Ellsworth Air Force Base near Rapid City, S. D., Sunday night and the two crewmen died instantly.

FOUR ILLINOISANS AMONG PLANE DEAD

PITTSBURGH (U.P.)—Four of the 22 persons killed in Sunday night's crash of a TWA airliner were Illinoisans. They were: Robert Banik, Chicago; George G. Berg, Western Springs; John W. Hamilton, Crete; and Maurice E. Moore, Chicago.

There were two holiday plane crashes in Illinois, each killing one person.

Tragedies Mar Holiday

It had been an almost perfect Easter across the nation until the air tragedy reports started coming in.

In the East, the TWA airliner had just taken off from Greater Pittsburgh Airport with 36 passengers and crewmen listed aboard. It seemed to drop from the sky and nosedived into a hillside. Twelve Easter travellers, the pilot, and the co-pilot escaped. Most of the dead were trapped in back seats.

Surprise Easter storms were blamed for the western crashes.

Near Pendleton, Ore., a Cessna 180 bucked fog and snow flurries before crashing in a wheat field. The four dead were from Spokane, Wash.

Storm Tears Wings

A wind, rain and hail storm caught a Beechcraft Bonanza near San Miguel, Calif., and tore a wing away. The plane crashed, killing four Californians.

Four more persons died when a Piper Tripac crashed and burned against a hill near San Bernardino, Calif.

The rash of plane crashes spread into the northern Plains, where a jet trainer flying from Tacoma, Wash., to the Offutt Air Force Base at Omaha, Neb., flamed out near Rapid City.

The pilot, 1st Lt. P. G. Wren, tried to make it to Ellsworth AFB. But the jet crashed about four miles from the base, killing Wren and 2nd Lt. J. H. Coates instantly.

In Illinois, student pilot Kurt Zimmerman, 31, Oak Park, was killed when another student pilot's plane landed on top of him. Gary Majors, 14, East Pekin, was killed in a private plane crash near Bethany.

A ground party set out from El Paso, Tex., in an attempt to reach Capt. F. G. Guerra in rock country near Deming, N. M. His jet flamed out while on a routine training flight and he made a crash landing.

Soft Coal Miners Receive 80c Day Increase in Pay

WASHINGTON (U.P.)—John L. Lewis' soft coal miners received an 80-cent a day pay increase today, bringing their basic wage to $20.25 a day or slightly more than $100 a week.

The price of soft coal went up at the same time to an average of about $5 a ton at the mine, industry sources estimated. They said this was the same level as in 1948 before the industry cut prices to try to halt a decline in sales.

The pay raise is the second and final instalment of a $2-a-day pay hike negotiated by Lewis and the soft coal producers last August. The United Mine Workers soft coal wage contract is subject to reopening for further demands this fall, but Lewis has given no indication whether he will take advantage of this.

Soft coal miners' average pay is already one of the highest in the country for production workers. The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimated it at more than $100 a week in December and January.

Old Town Asks to Separate from Shawneetown

SHAWNEETOWN, Ill. — A petition signed by owners of property situated in that part of Shawneetown originally laid out and surveyed has been filed with the Shawneetown city clerk which requests that the city council disconnect that territory from the city.

This, in brief, is a request that what is known as Old Shawneetown be separated from the Housing Authority Addition commonly called New Town.

According to legal opinion this would mean that the Housing Authority Addition would remain as the City of Shawneetown and the original territory would no longer be a part of the city.

The detached area could, however, be organized into a village or city with its own governing body just like any other incorporated place, but would not be known as Shawneetown, it is said. This is a new twist to a situation that has existed for several years.

Efforts have been made in the past to disconnect the areas known as Old Shawneetown and New Town. However, before the petitions have attempted to detach New Town and take away its corporate status, leaving Old Shawneetown as the corporate area.

The recently filed petition would separate the areas, but make the Old Town the unincorporated area.

The petition for disconnection of territory bears the signatures of about one-fifth the entire population of the area seeking detachment.

The ruling on the petition is entirely in the hands of the Shawneetown city council, which must wait for a period of at least 30 days from the date of the filing before any action is taken.

Army in San Antonio, Texas; and Carl Spurlock Owens of Raleigh; two brothers, Scott and James Owens of Harrisburg; one sister, Mrs. Hattie Prather of Harrisburg, and two grandchildren.

Coal Operators Ass'n President H. M. Moses Dies

WASHINGTON (U.P.)—Funeral services will be held here Tuesday for Harry M. Moses, a former coal miner who helped bring peace to the troubled coal industry by hammering out wage contracts with John L. Lewis.

Moses, 59-year-old president of the Bituminous Coal Operators Assn., died Sunday at Doctors hospital. He had been ill for some time.

Services will be in St. Margaret's Episcopal Church here. He will be buried Thursday in Danville, Ill. His family requested that no flowers be sent. They suggested instead that contributions be sent to the American Cancer Society.

Moses negotiated wage agreements with Lewis on a man-to-man and first-name basis during his last five years as president of the association without a threat of a strike.

Lewis, who like Moses is descended from Welsh ancestors, mourned his death as "a tragic loss."

Moses' father started work as a mule driver in the mines at the age of 11 and rose to become president of the coal mine subsidiaries of the U. S. Steel Corp.

Moses, born in Westville, Ill., dug coal in the mines while attending Wabash College in Indiana and later worked his way up from section foreman to mine superintendent. In 1923 he became superintendent of West Virginia and Kentucky divisions of the U. S. Coal and Coke Co., Gary, W. Va.

In 1938 he succeeded his father as president of the H. C. Frick Coke Co., U. S. Coal and Coke Co. and other U. S. Steel subsidiaries.

Moses was named head of the coal operators association after the industry had been plagued with strikes and near-strikes over a period extending back to the mid-twenties. In the five years preceding his tenure, there were nine different walkouts in the industry.

His retirement came at the age of 65 years. He also has been suffering from arthritis.

TWO DEAD, THREE HURT IN AUTO-TRUCK CRASH ON 45

DEATH CAR IN WHICH GILBERT McCABE AND EARL WHITAKER died on Route 45 near Harrisburg is being inspected by passersby in the top photo. The car, which was en route to Evansville, was demolished and is shown facing the opposite direction from which it was headed. The car figured in a sideswiping with a huge semi-trailer shown in lower photo. The truck was a Roadway Express loaded with heavy freight and it went down a steep embankment, too, after the collision. (Daily Register Staff Photos)

Gilbert McCabe, Earl Whitaker Die in Collision

Two Carrier Mills Men and Truck Driver are Injured

Two Saline county men were killed, two others were injured and a truck driver from Indianapolis was hurt this morning in an auto-truck collision on Route 45 near Middle Fork bridge a mile north-east of Harrisburg.

Dead were Gilbert McCabe, Stonefort, and Earl Whitaker, Carrier Mills.

Injured were Frank Killman and Hayward Lyles, both of Carrier Mills, who were in the car with McCabe and Whitaker, and Wayne Collier of Indianapolis, driver of a big semi-trailer loaded with freight.

State police said that the crash, a sideswiping of the two vehicles, occurred on the curve at a spot about 250 feet east of Middle Fork bridge. They said the auto was travelling to Evansville with the four men, that the truck was approaching Harrisburg.

Plunge Down Embankment

Coroner Elmer M. Gibbons, who was conducting an investigation today, said that Lyles told him that it was McCabe's car and that McCabe was driving. Seated in the front seat with McCabe was Whitaker, he said.

Collier was driving a big Roadway Express truck loaded with tow tractors.

Both vehicles plunged down the 20-foot embankment on the south side of the road, the truck tearing out 55 feet of guardrail before it landed in a mass of wreckage about 60 feet from the creek. The automobile carrying the four from this county faced the west as it landed. The demolished car stopped about 200 feet east of the truck.

Both McCabe and Whitaker apparently were killed instantly. The other three men were rushed to the Harrisburg hospital.

En Route to Work

The four in the auto, it was learned, were employed at the Chrysler plant at Evansville and were en route to their jobs.

Coroner Gibbons said that he had talked with another Roadway Express driver, Robert Leazenby of Indianapolis, who was travelling a short distance behind Collier, and with Lyles, that an inquest would be called when Lyles is able to give his testimony.

The Thornton funeral homes of Stonefort and Carrier Mills came after the bodies of the two who died. They had been moved to the Gibbons funeral home following the crash.

The body of McCabe, son of Charlie McCabe, was taken to the Stonefort funeral home and the body of Whitaker was taken to the funeral home at Carrier Mills.

Earl Glen Whitaker was 31 years old and he and his family resided on North Fifth street in Carrier Mills. He leaves his wife, Hilda, and two daughters, Earlene and Glenda Lee.

Arrangements have not been made except that the body will remain at the funeral home.

McCabe, who was about 38, leaves his wife, Dorothy, and two children, a boy and a girl.

Deputies Convoy Milk at Detroit

DETROIT (U.P.)—Milk transports convoyed by sheriff's deputies and individual farmers skirting along back roads defied roving bands of pickets today to bring large quantities of milk into Detroit to ease a critical milk shortage.

The milk brought into the city past pickets and other supplies sent into the state from Ohio and Indiana raised the city's milk supply enough to permit the city to call off plans for emergency rationing. Some sources estimated the supply as high as 75 per cent of normal.

As the milk rolled into the city, however, the situation around out-state milk receiving depots and along the state's highways grew more tense.

It was reported one flying farmer was scouting the state's roads by air to spot milk trucks heading to Detroit, then signalling their location to roving bands of pickets in automobiles.

Violence was reported at several spots on Easter Sunday.

Upset for Stevenson

Editorial — BY BRUCE BLOSSAT
Adlai Stevenson's prospects of winning the Democratic presidential nomination have been sharply downgraded by the smashing defeat he suffered in the Minnesota primary.

In one large stroke he has been converted from an easy front runner to a shaky contender who must now try to score a series of overwhelming primary victories to prove himself with Democratic leaders the country over. Senator Kefauver's upset triumph in Minnesota dealt Stevenson a heavy blow. The size of his defeat unquestionably will sow the suspicion among party professionals in many quarters that the former Illinois governor has lost the popular appeal he had in 1952.

Putting this loss together with his smaller defeat in New Hampshire, some party men may already be convinced that Stevenson doesn't have it in 1956. Certainly this view will soon be widely held if he fails to reverse the present primary trend. Reports have it that more than a few key professionals have had misgivings about Stevenson's vote-getting power this time. They and others seem sure to desert him at the earliest moment they believe their doubts are confirmed.

In Minnesota Kefauver demonstrated that the campaign assets he displayed in 1952 have, if anything, been magnified with passing time. His honed, folksy techniques on the hustings have obviously struck a responsive chord with many people. Possibly Minnesota farmers are more receptive to this approach than voters might be in other sectors of the nation.

That remains to be seen. Kefauver already has shown he could gain approval in New England. Soon he will have a chance to run up a score unopposed in Wisconsin, and two weeks after that in New Jersey, a state long thought to be strongly for Stevenson.

The prospect has arisen, too, that after his stunning Minnesota win his followers may try to stage a potent write-in campaign for him in Stevenson's own state of Illinois, where the onetime governor is now unopposed. Any further major blows to Stevenson probably will finish him. But most observers still doubt that Kefauver will inherit his support among the professionals. The general feeling is that a Stevenson collapse means the ascendancy of a dark horse candidate of moderate leanings and reasonably broad acceptability to both the northern and southern wings of the Democratic party.

Remembered Laughter
Millions of Americans will miss the acid wit of comedian Fred Allen, a man whom the historians of our time are sure to set down as one of the genuine humorists of the 20th century.

Fred was a musical comedy star and then a great name in the heyday of radio. Part of his fame came from his habit of directing many of his barbs at radio itself. He tilted with radio authorities in a sort of running feud.

Once he described a network vice president as a "bit of executive fungus that grows on desks exposed to conference." Another time, with radio still in mind, he said: "Vice presidents are officials who singly can do nothing, but who collectively can agree that nothing can be done."

There was always much, much more in the same vein. Fred Allen could see the follies of life as led even in the most august setting. His acute perception translated itself into great amusement for countless of his listeners.

Psychologist Has Report on Marriage

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—A psychologist who has studied the marriages of some 300 couples for the past 20 years claims the most significant change has been the attitude toward religion.

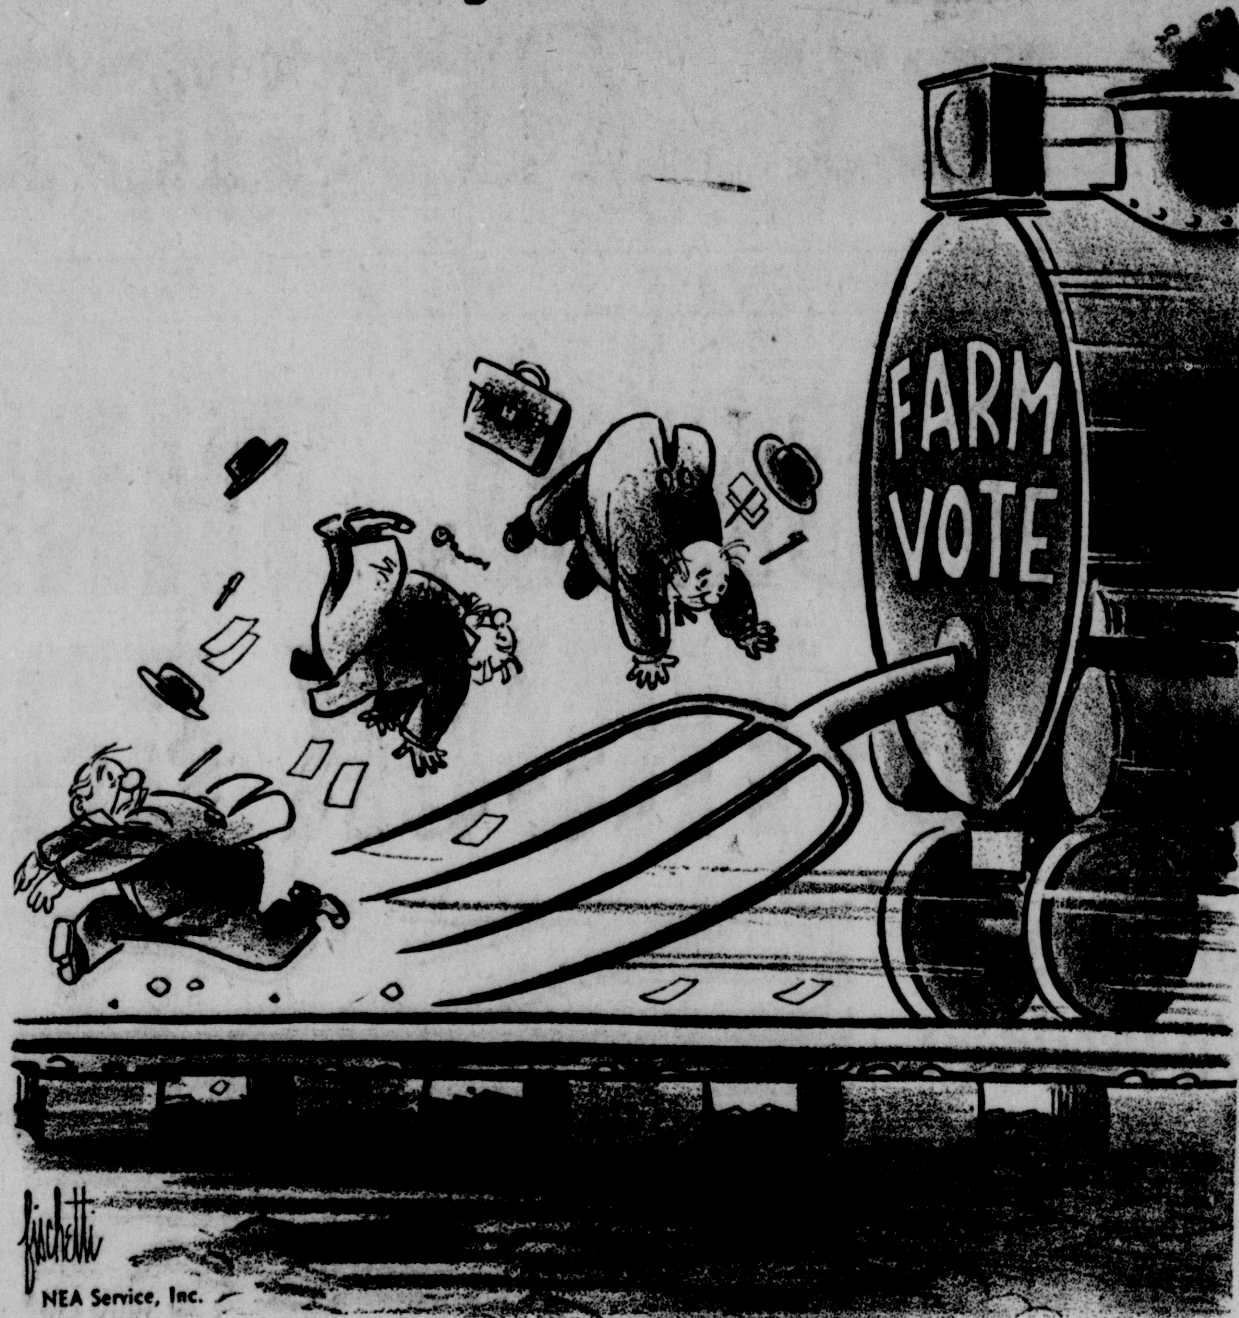

Prof. Lowell E. Kelly, psychologist at the University of Michigan, said both men and women place more emphasis on religious values today than they did when first married.

Kelly, who started the still in-complete study in 1935 with then-engaged friends and classmates, said other findings revealed that there also is a definite tendency among couples to be less neat, less energetic, have fewer interests and shorter tempers.

Instruments used in obtaining information for the study included psychological tests, personal interviews and questionnaires.

Kelly, past president of the American Psychological Association, said the attitude of man and wife toward housework also undergoes a change as the years go by. The change, he explains, is from one of indifference in the early years to a definite dislike.

Congressman Catcher

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

DREW PEARSON Says:
Benson Boosts Dried Milk With A Queen; Kefauver Woes Minnesota Colleague He Once Criticized; Senator Jenner Predicts Dire Things For G. O. P.

WASHINGTON. — Secretary of Agriculture Benson and the American Dairy Association have fallen out over a queen.

She is sparkling Ruth Marie Peterson, 20-year-old Minnesota milk-maid who was picked as dairy queen of 1955.

When Miss Peterson was first crowned, she was given a very enthusiastic welcome by Ezra Taft Benson. The secretary of agriculture is a kindly gentleman, but at first he refused to pose for a photographer with Queen Peterson in which both were to drink from the same glass of milk with two separate straws. The secretary of agriculture thought this was not quite sanitary and photographers were told to leave.

But suddenly they were called back. Benson had been reminded by his staff that if word leaked out that he had spurned a photograph with such a wholesome, healthy person as Ruth Marie Peterson, it wouldn't look good in the newspapers. So the photograph was snapped.

From that time on, Benson and staff have been enthusiastic about Queen Peterson and are sending her on a tour of Japan next month to boost American milk. The idea is to persuade the Japanese to drink more milk from U. S. surplus.

This, however, is where the American Dairy Association parted company with Queen Peterson and Benson. For what Miss Peterson will be boosting in Japan is Benson's dried milk. And what the American Dairy Association is boosting is fresh milk — straight out of the cow.

The harassed, harassed Ezra Taft Benson, however, milk is milk. His warehouses are overflowing with it — in powdered form. So, to whet foreign appetites for U. S. surplus milk, he wanted to expand Queen Peterson's trip not only to Japan, but to Spain, Italy and Colombia. The Minnesota branch of the Dairy Association, proud of Queen Peterson, put up $2,500 for her Japanese tour. The Agriculture Department is putting up the money for Colombia. But the trips to Spain and Italy have been called off. The parent ADA just wouldn't cooperate.

KEFAUVER MENDS A FENCE

Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota was called on the telephone in the Senate Democratic cloakroom. It was Senator Kefauver of Tennessee calling him from California, shortly after the bitter battle over Minnesota delegates in which Kefauver won a terrific victory. Humphrey went to the telephone, talked to his Tennessee colleague, hung up the receiver, came out of the phone booth.

"You can't help but like that guy," he remarked to near-by senators. "I don't know what he's got, but he's got something." "He's got vote appeal," remarked one senator.

"Yes," said Senator Russell of Georgia. "I learned that in Florida."

PESSIMISTIC SENATOR

Sen. Bill Jenner, Indiana Republican, is one of those shrewd, instinctive politicians who come out of the backwoods with an acute sense of smell regarding the public mood.

Two weeks before the 1955 Indiana municipal elections, Jenner predicted to a fellow Hoosier: "We're going to get the darndest licking we took since 1930," he said. "We're going to lose every city but Fort Wayne."

True enough, the Republicans lost the mayors of 70 Indiana cities — all the important cities except Fort Wayne. The other day, Jenner was accosted by the same Hoosier friend. He wasn't any more optimistic about the GOP political future. Already he has gone on record publicly that his colleague, Sen. Homer Capehart, Republican, will lose to ex-Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard, Democrat.

"I've been pleading and pounding the table at the national committee," continued Jenner, "but Len Hall just looks at me and says, 'The polls show Ike is far ahead and that we're going to win by putting Ike on television where he'll talk peace, prosperity, and progress.'"

"Don't pay any attention to these polls," opined Jenner. "Ike ain't poular back home any more. The Democrats are likely to win by default. The administration ain't doing a darn thing to help the farmer, and the midwest is gone. Just write that down in your book."

"Len used to be a good politician," continued Jenner. "But he talks like he's been hypnotized by those guys from Madison avenue. If Ike starts acting instead of preaching and gets out and talks to the people, he can win."

GENEROUS CONGRESSMAN

Congressman John Baldwin, California Republican, has tucked a neat little provision into the $25,000,000 superhighway bill that will cost the taxpayers about half a billion dollars.

The Baldwin amendment would pay 2 per cent of the $25,000,000 to utility companies in order to move their telephone-electric light poles and their water mains.

Under utility contracts with most states, the telephone, electric light, and water companies are required to move their poles and lines in case a highway is widened. This is in return for the fact that the utilities are given free right of way by the state alongside roads.

Thinking It Over

By Robert Dieffenbacher, D. D. (Written for NEA Service)

Yesterday was Easter. It was a day of rejoicing for the victory of life over death. It was symbolized by the blooming of flowers after a dormant period. It was symbolized by the coming forth of human beings in ew hats and dresses and clothing of all types.

Some people are critical of this show of ostentation on Easter. Some folks say that Easter has been commercialized. Let's pass over the pros and cons of this materialistic argument and think about the reality of yesterday.

Jesus was not defeated when His friends forsook Him. His influence for good was not lost and forgotten when He was convicted in the packed court. He did not admit defeat when Pilate washed his hands of the judgment. Jesus did not remain dead when His opponents tried to blot Him from the future with the finality of death.

He lived again on Easter. He has lived ever since with growing acceptance. He will continue to live.

If we donned our finery yesterday because of our sincere happiness for new life and because of our determination to put the living principles of Christ into action, then we can expect a great upsurge in religious activities.

Secretary Types Office Wolf; Study Discloses He's No Gable.

By RON BURTON

United Press Staff Correspondent
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—The average boss who chases his secretary (or someone else's secretary) around the office has dark hair, is about 45 years old, probably isn't as tall as most adult U. S. males and has several children.

And the secretary probably is married, divorced or widowed.

These are the conclusions of green-eyed Leone Willett, a secretary who now has a non-chasing boss. Miss Willett, an attractive 37-year-old brunette, based her findings on experience—both personal and of others.

"This whole thing came to light after I wrote a book," she said. "It was called 'Bosses Are Funny.' I'd wanted to show that offices weren't the dusty, dry, dull places many persons think they are."

"Well, I never got beyond thinking about the book until I broke an ankle badly last year and spent several months at home. Then I wrote about my 20 years as a secretary in Detroit, San Francisco and Los Angeles."

Miss Willett said the response from fast-stepping stenographers and secretaries all over the country was amazing. The mail still is coming in.

"Some of the things they told me!" she said. "But I guess it's what I expected."

Miss Willett said she believes very firmly that girls in business schools should be warned what may be in store for them if they work in certain industries.

"Most film studios have a reputation for this sort of thing," she said. "Sales forces of an organization also may tend to be over-attentive. Larger companies such as banks and oil firms usually are very good, however."

"This is particularly true in Detroit and San Francisco. They have more finesse there. In Hollywood most of them don't know what the word means — if they ever heard it."

Miss Willett's picture of the average office wolf is a combination of her own experience plus verbal and written recitations by other women office workers. She says that the object of the wolf's over-attention usually is the woman who is now or has been married.

The locale for the main players in the drama generally is the office supply closet where pads, paper, pencils etc. are kept. "It usually has a door," Miss Willett said meaningfully.

Miss Willett said the pursuit invariably starts with an "accidental" contact.

"The next stage is the difficult one. You've recognized that it wasn't imagination or accidental. You have a job. The question is whether you want to keep the job."

"At this point the best thing to do is act cold. If that doesn't work, you're going to have trouble until you quit."

Miss Willett said through the years she reached armed truces with overly-attentive bosses except in one case.

"He chased me until I quit," she said.

Her letters indicate a variety of reactions to the critical stage. One woman upended her boss into an oil drum. Another slugged hers although outweighed 184 to 102 pounds. A third lost her new hat in a scuffle and fled the office.

Eisenhower Swaps Easter Eggs with Kids at Annual White House Egg Roll

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower swapped Easter eggs and ended up with a basket of his own at the annual White House egg roll today.

The smiling chief executive also caused some political comment among parents of some of the thousands of small fry attending the traditional party. After welcoming the egg rollers, he said, "See you, next year."

Almost 6,000 squealing children and their parents were on hand when the Eisenhowers made their appearance at 10 a. m. CST.

Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower came to the party from the President's office in the east wing. They walked along a protective fence against which little faces pushed. As soon as they got to the fence, two purple eggs were pushed into the President's hand by a child on the other side.

"Hey, thank you very much," Mr. Eisenhower told the giver. Swaps Eggs With Kids

Soon an Easter basket and more eggs were transferred to the presidential side of the fence. As Mr. Eisenhower walked along, he began swapping eggs with the children and ended up giving all his away except one, a white one, which was left in his basket. Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower then walked up on the south portico of the White House, where he spoke into a microphone.

Mr. Eisenhower told the crowd he was sorry his own grandchildren were not on hand. They had

Kefauver Leaders Hope for 10 Per Cent Write In Vote in Illinois

SPRINGFIELD — Kefauver, for-President leaders, wooing support on the doorstep of a statewide Stevenson rally, today said they hope for a Kefauver write-in vote of 10 per cent in the Illinois April 10 primary.

The Kefauver group denied it would conduct an "organized campaign" for write-in votes, but named a half-dozen downstate congressional district and county leaders and said they would "urge the friends of Sen. Estes Kefauver to write in his name" in the primary. Adlai E. Stevenson's name is the only one on the Democratic ballot in the preferential presidential primary which does not bind delegates.

Asked how many delegates they hoped to elect, the answers of the Kefauver organization leaders ranged from "we don't know," to 10-20.

A. Bradley Eben, Chicago attorney and vice chairman of the national Kefauver organization, and Herbert C. Lockwood, Chicago, co-chairman of the state organization, named John R. Asher, Paris, as Kefauver's downstate manager.

It was Asher's announcement of support for Kefauver which led to the organization meeting for Kefauver today.

Asher, Democratic state central committeeman from the 21st Congressional District, announced last week he was bolting the regular state Democratic organization, which is for former Governor Stevenson.

Eben and Lockwood came here to meet with Asher and all other Kefauver backers were invited.

"We have neither the time, money or organization to conduct a drive for Kefauver write-ins in the Illinois primary," Asher said.

"However, I will write in Kefauver's name and ask his other friends to do the same."

Asher said he knows of 32 county chairmen who do not want Stevenson as the Democratic presidential candidate because they believe it may mean loss of the state ticket.

But he refused to name these or any of the state central committeemen who he said are also anti-Stevenson.

Stevenson and his Illinois backers were inclined to shrug or laugh off the "Scrap Stevenson" meeting. They conceded that Kefauver's downstate supporters would they did not believe it would hurt they didn't believe it would hurt the former Illinois governor's showing.

Stevenson is unopposed in the Illinois primary and today's meeting is his only major bid for primary.

Gov. Stratton Asks Nominations for 'Young American' Medals

SPRINGFIELD — Illinois residents today were invited by Gov. William G. Stratton to help nominate candidates for "Young American" medals for service or bravery.

The governor will nominate two young Illinoisans by June 30 for the national awards to be presented by President Eisenhower. The awards for exceptional personal bravery and for character and community service are for the year 1955 and candidates must have been under 19 at the time of their act of bravery or service.

Stratton asked Illinois residents and organizations to enter the names of their candidates by June 15.

House GOP Group To Demand Funds for Israel in Aid Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—A group of 50 House Republicans is considering a major campaign to add specific funds to the administration's $4,900,000 foreign aid bill to bolster Israel in its struggle with the Arab states.

Rep. Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY) said the "bare minimum" the GOP bloc would insist on would be a statement of congressional intent in the foreign aid bill to help Israel economically. He did not say whether the group would try to add funds to the bill for Israel to buy military weapons.

The group was expected to be joined by a number of Democrats who have been calling on the administration for increased aid for the Jewish nation.

President Decides Against Granting Israel Request

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower has decided against granting at this time Israel's request for 64 million dollars worth of arms, administration officials reported today.

The top-level decision was said to have been made last Wednesday. Mr. Eisenhower conferred for two hours that day with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and other key advisers. Israel made the request Nov. 1.

Informants said the administration has not ruled out the possibility of some later action on Israel's request for speedy jet fighters and other defensive arms. But this kind of equipment for the foreseeable future will be supplied by Britain, France, and perhaps even other Allied countries.

These informants said France "in a matter of days" is expected to deliver 12 Mystere IV jet fighter planes to Israel. France, it was said, definitely has decided to sell the planes to Israel. Information on their delivery, however, may be held up for security reasons until they are in Israeli hands.

Mount Vernon Mayor Answers Council Tonight

MOUNT VERNON, Ill. (AP)—Mayor O. R. Buford tonight answers the City Council that censured him.

Buford said last week he would reply at tonight's council meeting to the four councilmen who censured him two weeks ago.

The resolution said Buford made a mockery of the office of mayor. Last week they voted to evict his vacuum cleaner business from space he rents in City Hall unless the rent they claim is overdue is paid.

Buford will go to the meeting from a weekend spent in a hospital following a fist fight with a retired police captain Saturday. The mayor and former Capt. Delbert Carlton exchanged several blows in front of City Hall Saturday, supposedly because Buford cursed Carlton over an incident of two years ago.

Police Chief Verner Pigg, who witnessed the altercation and helped separate the combatants, said he didn't see any blood shed.

Buford's physician had the mayor admitted for a physical check-up but the mayor's condition or possible injury, if any, could not be learned.

Buford left the hospital Sunday and went to work as usual today. His office said he showed no sign of the fight.

Widow Pleads Guilty to Attempt To Kill Rival

MORRIS, Ill. (AP)—A 50-year-old widow pleaded guilty today to the attempted murder of a woman she called a love rival.

Mrs. Ruth Leves Olson, Grundy County nurse, changed her plea from innocent to guilty to the shooting of Elsa Kussler, 43.

Circuit Judge Robert E. Larkin delayed sentencing pending a hearing Friday. The crime carries a 1-to-14-year prison term.

Miss Kussler was shot and severely wounded Jan. 14 in the office of Illinois Industrial Commission Chairman S. J. Holderman, where she worked as Holderman's secretary.

Mrs. Olson told police she shot Miss Kussler "to hurt Jim." She said Holderman had switched his affections from her to Miss Kussler.

Truman Wants to Be Neutral in Party Battle

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former President Harry S. Truman said today he's "trying to be neutral" in the heated battle for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The ex-President, whose nod could be worth a lot to a candidate, also told reporters that he doesn't think the party will be split or harmed in any way by the current political slugfest between Adlai E. Stevenson and Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.).

On the contrary, Mr. Truman said, the Stevenson-Kefauver race can help the Democrats by "working up the people's interest" in the coming presidential election.

Mr. Truman talked to newsmen while taking an early morning stroll around Times Square in New York, where he is visiting. He steadfastly refused to say whether he personally favored Stevenson, Kefauver or Gov. Averell Harriman, an "inactive" candidate for the nomination.

"I shall support whomever the Democrats nominate as their candidate," he replied to all questions designed to flush out the secret of his preference.

Tips on Traffic Safety

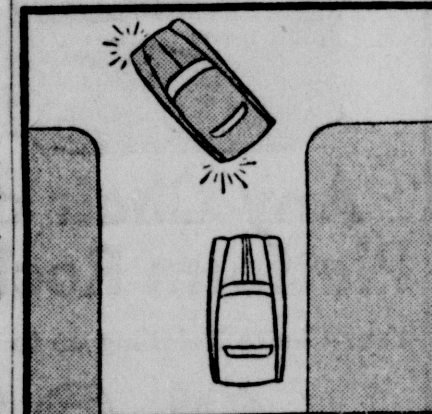

By

CHARLES F. CARPENTIER

Secretary of State

Mechanical advances have naturally done much in recent years to add to the safety as well as the comfort of late model automobiles. One safety device added to the newer cars is the automatic turn signal. The importance of this mechanical aid is well known.

Before the advent of the automatic turn signal many motorists neglected to give a hand signal before turning their vehicles. With some of these drivers it was sheer carelessness, while others neglected to give the proper hand signal if the weather was inclement. The driver of a vehicle equipped with the automatic devices has no excuse for not giving the proper signal when turning.

But even with the automatic turn signal, some accidents are being caused by their use. These occur when a driver gives the signal for a turn one way and then turns in the opposite direction. The value of the automatic turn signal is lost if the motorist does not use it properly.

A copy of the completely new "Rules of the Road" booklet will be sent to you free upon request. Write to CHARLES F. CARPENTIER, Secretary of State, Springfield, Illinois.

Stratocruiser Crashes; 3 Dead, Two are Missing

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—A Northwest Orient Airlines Stratocruiser crashed in Puget Sound five miles south of here today.

Thirty-two persons were saved, three were known dead and two were missing. The dead included an Oriental child and woman.

An airline official said Carl Thompson, engineer, and Gene Johnson, co-pilot, were unaccounted for.

Joe Dollinger, Seattle skin diver, was searching for the missing persons along with the crews of air and surface craft.

None of the survivors appeared to be injured seriously, the Coast Guard said.

The airliner was Northwest's Flight No. 2, en route to Chicago via Portland, Ore.

Eisenhowers Attend Easter Services, Pose for Pictures with Relatives

WASHINGTON (AP)—The President and Mrs. Eisenhower, like millions of other Americans, attended Easter services Sunday and then posed for pictures with his relatives.

The Chief Executive and his wife attended packed services at the National Presbyterian Church.

Some eager church-goers waited for more than an hour in a line that circled the block twice and hundreds of spectators in Easter finery lined the sidewalks across from the church for a glimpse of the First Family.

Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, the President's minister, prayed that God would "let thy mercy rest" on the President and "all in authority." He asked that the Lord's will would be triumphant over "superstition and fear and hate."

After the services, Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower posed briefly for photographers on the church steps with Dr. Elson and movie cowboy Roy Rogers and his wife, Dale Evans. The Rogers took part Saturday in the eighth birthday celebration of David Eisenhower, the President's oldest grandson.

Back at the White House, the President changed from the club coat and striped trousers he had worn to church to a dark blue suit and posed with his family for a large group of photographers who had gathered.

Mrs. Eisenhower wore a navy blue dress. Her secretary described it as "one-piece linen-like weave" with an "easy skirt" and a "cape-like stole." It was designed by Mollie Parnis.

Mrs. Eisenhower topped her Easter outfit with a yellow "four-leaf clover pillbox" hat by Sally Victor. Her long yellow gloves matched her hat. She wore a double strand of pearls around her neck.

Present for the mass picture-taking was Mrs. Eisenhower's mother, Mrs. John S. Doud, who smiled gaily as she gathered her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren around her. Also present were Maj. and Mrs. John Eisenhower, the President's son and daughter-in-law, with their four children, David, Barbara Anne, Susan and Mary Jean.

He also handles a 15-minute radio newscast twice a week over KSGM, St. Genevieve, Mo.

Jackson served as editor of the Eldon newspapers since October of 1954. Prior to that he was sports editor and reporter for the Marion, Ill. Daily Republican for almost four years and served in the same capacity for the Benton, Ill. Evening News for a year.

He graduated from Harrisburg Township high school in 1945, was a student at Southern Illinois university two years and graduated with a Bachelor of Journalism degree from the University of Missouri. He was sports editor of the Purple Clarion in high school and was a sports editor for The Daily Register while in high school.

While he was in Eldon, the Eldon Advertiser won its first Missouri Blue Ribbon Weekly newspaper award as one of the top 15 weekly papers in the state. At Eldon he was a vice-president of the Lions club and secretary of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and a member of Ionia Lodge No. 381, A. F. & A. M. He was also district editor for southwest Missouri of the Missouri Jaycee, state Junior Chamber of Commerce publication.

He and his wife, the former June Ferguson of Herrin, are the parents of two children, Evan, 5, and Mark, 3. Mrs. Jackson, a graduate of Southern Illinois university, is a member of Beta Sigma Phi sorority. They are now living at 706 Marshall street in Fredericktown.

Polio Facts

WASHINGTON (AP)—Polio facts for 1956:

Safety: Vaccine now considered safe as science can make it; risk for a child negligible.

Supplies: Probably enough by end of June to finish giving two shots to the birth-through-14 age group. Not enough for everybody.

How many doses: Two doses at least four to six weeks apart. Dr. Jones E. Salk recommends delaying third booster shots while supplies are short.

Protection: Two shots will protect most children in 1956. Vaccine was 75 per cent effective in 1955.

When to inoculate: Before the polio season is best. Some authorities oppose shots during height of season but U. S. Health Service approves.

Priorities: Nationally, 0 through 14 years, but some variations in individual states. States are not bound by federal recommendation.

Polio season: Starts in the spring in the south, a little later in the north. Nationally, cases start climbing in May, hit a peak from mid-August to mid-September.

Rule States Have No Power to Punish Under Sedition Law

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court ruled today that the states have no power to punish persons who advocate the violent overthrow of the federal government.

The 6-3 decision applied directly to Pennsylvania's sedition law. But it also had the effect of striking down such sedition laws in 42 states, Alaska and Hawaii. The laws make it illegal to teach the overthrow of the federal, as well as the state governments, by force and violence.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, speaking for the majority, held that Congress has enacted federal anti-sedition laws which cover the problem to the exclusion of parallel state legislation.

"Administration of state acts would conflict with the operation of the federal plan," he said.

The decision affirmed a ruling of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court in the case of Pittsburgh Communist leader Steve Nelson. Nelson, 53-year-old native of Yugoslavia, was convicted in 1952 under the state sedition law.

TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS

The Downstate Fishermen's Guide

By PETE BROWN

The big fishing news in Southern Illinois this week centered around Little Grassy Lake where large-mouth bass were running—big, frisky and plentiful.

Five pounders have been common, and six and seven pound lunkers have been boated by more than one fisherman. Bill Dalmer of Marion landed a six-and-one-half pound bass to go along with one weighing a pound more caught a week previously.

Julius Swayne, operator of the Little Grassy boat dock, reports seeing two strings of five bass between three and five and one half pounds, and several others "all over two pounds and most about five." Swayne sums up: "I would say that bass fishing at Little Grassy is good right now, in fact about as good on big stuff as it will be all year."

Most of them are being taken off the points in four to six feet of water. They are hitting deep running spoon and spinner type plugs. Crappie catches have been few, but a couple of nice strings have been reported.

Fishermen Turn Out

At Horseshoe Lake, fishermen began turning out with a proportionate increase in catches. Pole and line fishing with minnows accounted for some fair crappie catches, but the catfish bag was down slightly over the previous week. Except for large waves, the condition of the lake was good.

Fishing at Lake Murphysboro showed an increase in channel catfish, crappie and bass catches. It's the first time this year that crappie have been caught, and they're hitting minnows for the pole and line men. Several bass have also been taken on pole and line. Both underwater and surface lures began working for the bait casting fishermen.

Crab Orchard fishing was virtually nil.

Paul Spooner, one of the more dedicated anglers in the Ramsey area, caught four largemouth totaling 15 pounds during two "windy and cold" days of fishing at Ramsey's State Conservation Area Lake. Spooner used a deep running lure with pork rind attached, and was casting fairly close to shore.

Ramsey Lake, a good bass producer, will be described in the next installment of "The Guide."

Lake Glendale

A word of thanks to Don Hansen of the State Natural History Survey for the following information on Lake Glendale, an 82-acre largemouth and bluegill spot constructed in 1939. The lake and wooded areas surrounding it are maintained for recreational use by the Shawnee National Forest with headquarters in Harrisburg.

Located three miles north of the junction of highways 145 and 146, near Dixon Springs, the lake has been managed for bass and bluegill fishing throughout its 17-year history, with Hansen in charge of the program.

Says Hansen, "In the early years of fishing between 1942 and 1946, Glendale furnished outstanding bluegill fishing but mediocre bass fishing. During that time, small bass were abundant but bass over 10 inches in length were scarce. Two large-scale experimental management operations carried on by the Natural History Survey resulted in greatly increased numbers of bass measuring from 11 to 16 inches, and bass fishermen profited by this increase.

"The two operations included complete draining and restocking of the lake in the fall of 1946 and a partial draining in the fall of 1950 for the purpose of removing excess bass measuring less than 10 inches. Five hundred pounds of small bass were removed in 1950, making it possible for the remaining small bass to grow considerably larger than might otherwise have been possible.

Bluegill Larger

"While bass fishing, measured in terms of the number and weight of bass caught per trip, has improved since 1946 and hit a peak in 1955, bluegill fishing has not been quite as good as before. Individual sizes, however, are running larger (some bluegills now measure eight to nine inches). The average bluegill catch is about three-fourths as large as it was in the 1942-46 period. Fair strings of bluegills are still caught on worms in deep water, especially around spawning beds, but flyfishing for bluegills along the cattail beds is much less productive than before '46.

"The effectiveness of fish management efforts on Lake Glendale is determined from the records kept on hook-and-line fishing. Fishermen are required to have a special permit to fish the lake and to report their catches. The permits are issued free at the Glendale bathhouse. Live minnows are prohibited in order to keep the lake from becoming stocked with species not included in the management program.

"Various kinds of fish popular with sportsmen, such as carp, bullheads and crappie, have been kept out in the interest of maintaining bass fishing which might suffer if these were present."

The fishing season at Lake Glendale runs from April 15 to Labor day. Private boats may be kept on the lake during the season by permission of the district ranger, C. A. Gregory, of Vienna.

Facilities at Glendale include boat livery, bathhouse, beach, picnic shelters and campsites.

The week-end tragedy at Crab Orchard Lake points up, once again, the wisdom of taking every possible safety precaution when venturing forth on any body of water, particularly such large areas as Crab Orchard and Horseshoe Lake.

Boaters should always wear buoyant life jackets. Crab Orchard, largely unprotected and presenting a large surface area to the wind, can become extremely dangerous. With any kind of wave action on the lake, it is important to keep from overloading the bow of the boat.

Special automotive taxes paid by U. S. motorists in 1954 totaled $6,200,000,000.

Roberts played end on the high

DETERMINED—Mickey Mantle leans into a batting practice pitch at St. Petersburg with mouth-opening effort.

Roberts Fell Into Pitching and Worked At It Like Bob Feller

By AL CARTWRIGHT
NEA Special Correspondent
CLEARWATER, Fla. — (NEA) — Robin Roberts, the best thing that ever happened to the Phillies, starts his working day by sprinting from left to center field back again, maybe a dozen times.

Then he stations himself in deepest center field and makes with the knee bends, the toe touch, the neck exercises. He stretches on the lawn and crosses one leg over the other, touches his piggy back in a series of pull-ups. Besides his uniform, he's bundled up in a towel and a big red jacket.

This goes on for some 30 minutes after which he cools off in the clubhouse and then emerges to join the enlisted men's workout.

This is the bit that Bob Feller followed so religiously at the height of his career. He'd do it all season, making for an extra added attraction for early customers.

What's good enough for Rapid Robert is good enough for Rapid Robin. You look at him doing these exercises and wonder how he got to be a $50,000 a year man with the privilege of conducting his own private practice. You know he went to Michigan State and received $25,000 for signing. His six straight years of winning 20 or more games.

What of the boy Roberts? Did his old man stand over him with a club until he could catch a ball? Did he cut his teeth on a pitcher's toe plate? Or did the family want him to become an insurance man, or a cemetery lot salesman?

What a plot for a soap opera! But the true story involves none of these cornballs.

It's a simple tale. There was a little boy in Springfield, Ill., who went to a two-room school in the country. His father, a transplanted Welsh coal miner, did odd jobs around the town's power company to keep his six kids as happy as possible.

Robin, the tyke, always was throwing some kind of ball. At school he got a chance to be on a real live baseball team for the first time.

"During vacations, I'd listen to the Cubs' games on radio all summer," the great right-hander reminisces. "I'd play catch with my brother outside the parlor window, throwing the ball back and forth and listening to the entire broadcast. Try it some time; you must make a thousand throws."

"We were eating supper and listening to the radio the day in 1938 when Gabby Hartnett hit the home run in the dusk to win the pennant. Bill Nicholson was one of my unseen pets. I was quite happy to be playing with him on the Phillies later."

Kluszewski Returns to Action, But Reds Lose, 6-5; Yankees Beat Cardinals, 5-2

By United Press

Ted Kluszewski, the muscle man who is given a good chance to topple Babe Ruth's record of 60 homers in a season, has returned to action to pep up the Cincinnati Redlegs and persecute rival pitchers.

The Philadelphia Phillies eked out a 6-5 victory over Cincinnati Sunday at Clearwater, Fla., but the Redlegs romped off the field like winners because "Big Klu" played a full game for the first time this spring. Troubled with a crippled left hip, he got two hits in three times at bat and drove in two runs in the seventh inning to tie the score at 4-4.

Several of the top clubs already have enough injured and ailing players to keep their managers awake on the long ride north and the Brooklyn Dodgers lost outfielder Sandy Amoros while scoring a 4-3, 11-inning victory over the Chicago White Sox at Tampa. Amoros twisted his right ankle sliding into second base and will be out two or three weeks.

The Dodgers sent Don Newcombe, one of their first line pitchers, to Orlando to lead their "B" squad against the Washington Senators. The American Leaguers cuffed Newcombe for all their runs in a 13-2 victory.

The crippled Yankees, with Mickey McDermott pitching the full nine innings, broke a 5-game losing streak by downing the St. Louis Cardinals at St. Petersburg, 5-2.

Right-hander Frank Sullivan of the Boston Red Sox took a fairly rugged pounding from the Detroit Tigers while losing, 6-3.

Bob Friend of the Pittsburgh Pirates limited the Kansas City Athletics to four hits in nine innings while coasting to an 8-1 triumph at New Orleans.

Dusty Rhodes, Daryl Spencer and Gail Harris hit first inning homers to help the New York Giants beat the Chicago Cubs at Phoenix, Ariz., 7-2, as the Cleveland Indians scored a 5-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in a dust storm at Tucson, Ariz., and Milwaukee scored seven unearned runs to best Atlanta of the Southern Assn., 10-2.

Giles Predicts Banner Year For National L.

TAMPA, Fla. — President Warren Giles predicted Saturday that 1955 would be a banner year for the National League, forecasting a close pennant race and a "big" increase in attendance.

Having finished a tour of all the league spring training camps in Florida and Arizona, Giles said he was impressed by "the improvement of all the clubs, except Brooklyn."

"The Dodgers just didn't look good to me in the three games I saw them play, and they were using most of their regulars," he explained. "But it was the same way last spring and then when the season opened, they got off that miracle start."

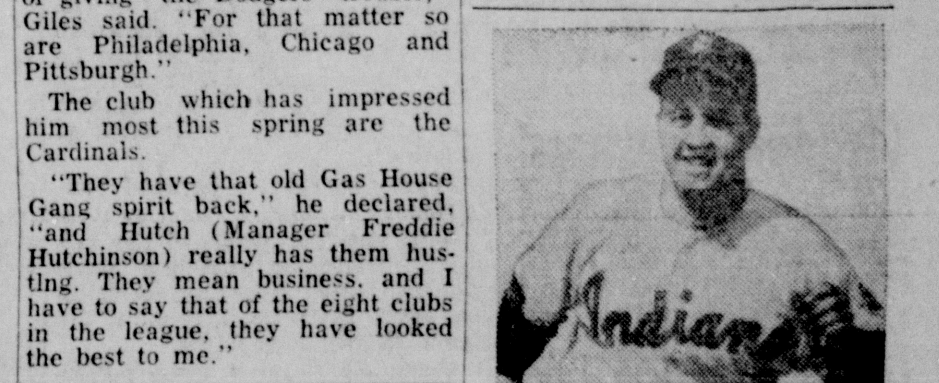

"Well, I'm sure it won't happen again this season. The league is going to be so evenly balanced that I don't see how any club can improve on its 1955 finish."

He added that he wasn't conceding the Dodgers the pennant, but "if they win it again, it isn't going to be easy like it was in 1955."

Milwaukee, Cincinnati, St. Louis and New York all "are capable of giving the Dodgers trouble," Giles said. "For that matter so are Philadelphia, Chicago and Pittsburgh."

The club which has impressed him most this spring are the Cardinals.

"They have that old Gas House Gang spirit back," he declared, "and Hutch (Manager Freddie Hutchinson) really has them hustling. They mean business, and I have to say that of the eight clubs in the league, they have looked the best to me."

House Committee Democrats Urge Program to Save Family Farm

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Democratic members of a House Agriculture subcommittee unanimously recommended today that Congress adopt a three-point program to save the "disappearing" family farm.

They said rigid price supports at 90 per cent of parity must be provided for basic crops this year to meet "the threat of a continuing depression in agriculture." The subcommittee's two Republican members disagreed.

A Senate-House Conference committee, despite administration objections, already has included the proposed one-year restoration of rigid 90 per cent supports in the "catch all" farm bill it is drafting. The conferees resume their work Tuesday.

The Agriculture subcommittee, headed by Rep. Clark W. Thompson (D-Tex.), traveled 3,000 miles in seven Southern states during its investigation of family farms.

Its two Republican members said in a minority report that rigid supports must be accompanied by rigid production controls which would "put a very severe burden" on the family-sized farm.

But Democrats said restoration of 90 per cent supports this year would increase farm income 740 million dollars from marketings of wheat, corn and cotton.

The Democrats also recommended: (1) that Congress begin drafting a new, long-range farm program that would provide family farms an average 100 per cent of parity price supports for all crops without extending the same benefits to big, corporate farms, and (2) that the catch-all farm bill include provision for federal subsidy payments to compensate farmers for land taken out of production since 1953.

The majority report noted that the Census Bureau has reported that 600,000 small farm units "disappeared" from 1950 to 1954.

Fire Guts Billy Rose Mansion

MOUNT KISCO, N. Y., April 2.—The 28-room mansion of showman Billy Rose was gutted by fire today, destroying all the furnishings which included antique furniture and a world famous collection of paintings.

Four servants escaped unharmed.

Only the four walls of the red brick Georgian building were standing when Rose and bride-to-be, Joyce Mathews, arrived at the scene shortly after dawn.

Volunteer firemen were powerless to halt the blaze which roared through the house on the 54-acre estate.

The volunteers from Mount Kisco, Armonk and Chappaqua tried to string these hoses to a pond nearly one mile from the huge house. The estate's swimming pool, the pride of Rose's former wife, swimmer Eleanor Holm, was dry.

Firemen said that later in the year the pool would have been filled, enabling them to use its water to save the house.

Firemen said the loss was "well up into the hundreds of thousands of dollars." It was not known whether the house and its furnishings were insured.

Hunting or carrying of firearms is forbidden in all national parks.

Only five days ago the Kifissia Hotel had been almost deserted. Now it bulged with British Empire troops. In the lobby a crowd in khaki uniforms set up a steady bass hum in the variety of tongues of an international army. The uniforms were of the same drab wool but the shoulder patches told a story of the gathering of Aussies and Britons and New Zealanders and Arabs and Cyprians and Palestinians. From the bar, which stood to the right of the lobby, there came a continuous tinkle of glasses intermittently punctuated by the clang and sliding drawer of the cash register.

Over in the corner by the window, a lone civilian sat slumped in an overstuffed chair, oblivious of the hustle and bustle about him. His feet were propped on the window sill, his hat was shoved down over his eyes and an unlit pipe hung upside down from his teeth. He wore an expensive but unpressed tweed suit which looked quite in place, and his heavy wool tie was loosened at the throat. He was neither awake nor asleep—he was a study in boredom.

Perhaps, if you moved in literary circles or were just an avid reader of minor novels, you would recognize him. Michael Morrison, an American, was one of those "bread-and-butter" writers found on every publisher's list. A writer with a small but faithful band of readers which grew slightly with each new work. The income from his four books had been augmented by regular contributions to magazines and he had written himself into a steady and comfortable income bracket. Morrison's rise was the typical writer's story of many years of struggle for acceptance, bitter disappointments and the "rest of the frustrations and fears that plague that supposedly charmed profession.

Even at the age of 35 he showed traces of his earlier athletic career, for his six-foot frame carried some 200 pounds of muscle and ease. Although his face retained a little of the eternal boyish look, there were also unmistakable etchings of hardness and cynicism. In all, Michael Morrison bore a remarkable resemblance to the public's conception of a writer.

He eased his way through the crowd out to the sidewalk and stood at the curb for several moments looking for a taxi. The trip to Greece had fanned the bitter embers of memory into a flame. How often had he and his wife planned the trip? They had talked of it for years. It was to have been the honeymoon they never had. Ellie's uncle, a Greek importer, had left her a legacy of some $9000. But each year something new arose to prevent their taking the trip.

When at last the plans for the trip began to take real form — then exploded in an automobile accident in the fog on the Golden Gate Bridge. Ellie had been killed instantly.

There were months of guilt, of utter despondency, loneliness and fear of sleep because of the nightmares. And then the slow resurrection, with the help of his parents and many good friends but, mainly, through the love for his young son and daughter.

He would have left the money in Greece for many more years. The idea of coming to Greece without Ellie repelled him. But this was April of 1941 and the floodgates had opened. In the north, the invasion had begun. His bank and agent advised him to claim the inheritance as quickly as possible as the European situation was becoming more and more uncertain.

"Petraki, 17," he told the cab driver and they whisked away toward Athens. Now, nearly every one in Athens had a relative in America and this driver was no exception. In this particular case it was a brother in Cleveland. After Morrison assured the fellow that he had never been to Cleveland but would certainly look up the man's brother if he ever got there, the conversation switched to the more pressing subject of the moment.

Everything hinged, these days, on the ability of the newly arrived British Expeditionary Force to halt the German advance in the northern provinces. Only last winter the little Greek Army had run the Italians from the country, and the cab driver reasoned that if the Greeks could beat the Italians, surely the British would stop the Germans. Besides, the driver added for good measure, America would soon be in the war.

The cab came to a halt in front of the outsize yellowstone house at Petraki, 17. Morrison paid the driver and thanked him for the most interesting discussion and crossed the street.

The brass knocker beat a thunder through the ancient mansion of Fotis Stergiou. In a moment its equally ancient butler, Tassos, led him into the home of the attorney. Tassos rapped softly, then ushered him into the office of Mr. Stergiou. The old man looked up from his all-encompassing desk and smiled a wrinkled smile of recognition. He was a quaint old duck. A shock of gray hair stood straight up from his head, a large scarf was wrapped around his shoulders and a pair of square-cut glasses were balanced precariously on the tip of his nose.

"Aha, my American writer friend, right on time, as usual," he greeted Mike and waved to a seat. "Coffee, please, Tassos," his high-pitched voice ordered. He dug through the stacks of papers on his desk and found the brief. As he opened the folder and thumbed through it, Mike once again found himself staring at the magnificent black pearl ring on the wrinkled little finger of the attorney.

"How much longer?" Mike asked.

"Always in a hurry, you Americans. One might get the idea you don't like our country."

"I have a plane for London in the morning."

The old man tapped his pipe empty in the ash tray, paused reflectively a moment, then spoke. "Mr. Morrison, I wonder if I could ask a favor of a personal nature?"

"If I can help."

"I have a document, one of great importance to a client of mine. With things so disrupted these days I am a bit hesitant to use the mails. I wonder if you would mind delivering it for me personally in London?"

"Certainly. I'd be most happy to."

The old man reached into an inside pocket of his smoking jacket and withdrew a small white envelope. Not much of a document, Morrison thought. Stergiou held it in his hand for several seconds, then handed it to Mike. It bore a London address to one Sir Thomas Whitely.

"Normally," the old man apologized, "I wouldn't ask, but there is a great deal involved for my client and with the chaos of the day."

Mike grinned. "Nothing a bit off color, by any chance?"

"Oh, you writers all have suspicious natures. No, nothing like that but a bit out of channels, if you know what I mean. I would deem it a great favor if you took extra precautions. The document does have great value."

Morrison slipped the envelope into his breast pocket. "I'll guard it with my life."

"Please do," Stergiou said, and they both laughed.

Tassos crept into the solarium and plugged a phone in beside his master. The attorney spoke briefly and replaced the receiver with a sigh. "I am terribly sorry, Mr. Morrison. They are literally swamped at the bank. It will be several hours before they will be able to get the releases over."

"I hope nothing fouls up."

"I assure you I'll stay right with it. The bank is working around the clock. Everyone is trying to get his money out of Greece these days. Could you return at—let's say eight o'clock—that will give us a safe edge in time."

"Yes, certainly."

Stergiou ushered Morrison down the long, statue-filled corridor and they exchanged goodbys. The instant the door closed, Stergiou spun about and shuffled quickly down the corridor and into his office. A stocky man, sporting a huge walrus mustache and bundled in an English mackintosh, sat behind Stergiou's desk.

"Did you give it to him?" the man asked.

Stergiou paced nervously before the desk. "Yes, I gave it to him, Major Wilken."

Major Howe-Wilken of British Intelligence arose and walked to the window and clasped his hands behind him. "Soutar and I have been under surveillance from the moment we landed in Greece. If my guess is right, Konrad Heisler is hiding out somewhere in Athens this minute directing their operation. If he is, Mr. Stergiou, our lives aren't worth a suit."

"Then why didn't you pass the list to your military for delivery?"

"I regret to inform you that the situation at headquarters is one of utter confusion. I wouldn't wager that the military could get the King of Greece out of the country."

"Then, our American friend, Mr. Morrison, will deliver the list for us. Just a precaution, mind you. Fortunately he is above suspicion."

Airman Charged With Shooting German Guard

WIESBADEN, Germany, April 2.—A 22-year-old airman from Chicago was under arrest today charged with shooting a German guard in an attempt to rob the American Express Co. bank here. The American Express was wounded in a gunfire exchange with the guard.

Air Force officials said Airman 3.C. Sigmund R. Rataj, whose mother Mrs. Amalie Rataj lives at Chicago, was in "fair condition" from two bullet wounds in the chest.

German guard, Wolfgang Metall, hit in the leg and thigh by shots from Rataj's .45 caliber automatic, was reported in "good condition."

Rataj walked into the American Express about 6:40 p. m. Saturday, pointed his gun at a German cashier and demanded "Geld hier! Geld hier! (money here, money here)."

The cashier, thinking it was a premature April Fool's joke left his cage. Rataj backed off, seized a scrubwoman as a shield, and started firing when Metall appeared.

Despite his wounds, Metall returned the fire, wounding the American. He was disarmed and arrested.

Officials said he would be tried by court martial. They said German authorities would not be involved as Metall was an American employee.
